

Between April 16 and April 23, Waterstone Human Capital surveyed Canadian leaders from their Canada's Most Admired Corporate Cultures database of just under two thousand Canadian executives.

The Waterstone Insights Leader Pulse asked Canadian leaders three questions in their new one-minute pulse survey.

This is the first in a series of leadership-targeted surveys intended to understand how leaders are thinking about, responding to and planning to emerge out of the COVID-19 crisis.

Question 1:

Regarding the COVID-19 virus situation, what are your top 3 pain-points/considerations in your day-to-day business as a leader?

Well-being of staff and safety of team members/
customers/suppliers

77%

Cash flow preservation and sales/revenue

68%

Economic factors / volatility and viability /
continuity of operations

45%

Leveraging market disruption

19%

Uncertainty and fear

14%

Question 2:

On a scale of 1 to 10, how ready do you feel to lead your organization through the impact of COVID-19? Please select the reasons why you chose that rating.

7.8/10

Have a great team working with / alongside me

Have a highly engaged/ quality workforce

Have a strong crisis / disaster operational / communications plan

Have great advisors

Access to helpful information

Question 3:

What are you doing, or planning to do now, that you believe will help you successfully emerge from this crisis?

Significantly increase communication with team members

Staying close to customers / suppliers

Create new / improve products or service offerings

Preserving cash

Reducing costs/headcount

